Online courses

Build confidence and competence in key areas of museum practice

The courses are free and available exclusively to members.
Through a combination of content and exercises, you can complete each course at your own pace, at a time and place that suits you.

The courses link to the MA key priorities and campaigns, and range from ethics in museums, collections, learning and engagement, Anti-racism, decolonisation, and climate justice.

Events

MA events for learning and innovation from the very start of your museum career.

As a member you can attend free Members Together events that are held throughout the UK and online.

You also get exclusive discounts on all our other events, with topics covering essential areas of museum practice, including career development, collections management, curatorial practice, income generation, technology, exhibitions and displays.

We also run an annual conference each year which you can attend online or in person, and where there are volunteering opportunities for students.

Museums Journal

Quality journalism giving you the latest about museums online and in print

Membership includes a subscription to Museums Journal - either online only, or in print and online.

Inspiring and infomative content includes news, analysis, opinion, reviews, features, and practical advice.

You can search thousands of articles from the archive and stay up to date with the latest developments in museums and galleries.

As a student you may find it useful to sign up to our twice weekly newsletter, containing news, jobs, events and more.

Campaigns, advocacy and ethics

Campaigning for our communities, people, collections and planet

We run campaigns linked to our programmes and content on key priorities for the sector. These include anti-racism, climate justice, workforce, decolonisation, and empowering collections.

Much of this work and that of our advocacy and code of ethics work has produced reports and case studies that lead and inform the sector. All available on our website, they are invaluable resources for students.
